

HOLLAND IS REJOICING

Birth of Princess Assures Netherlands its Independence.

Queen Wilhelmina and Her Infant Daughter Are Both Doing Well and After Ten Days' Confinement the Populace Are Giving Vent to Wild Jubilations — Herald in Ancient Dress Presides at the Birth.

The Hague, May 1.—Wilhelmina, Queen of the Netherlands, gave birth to a daughter yesterday morning.
The condition of Her Majesty is most satisfactory, the infant princess doing well, and Holland is celebrating the happy event from one end of the country to the other, with excitement of joy and gratification such as seldom before have been known on the part of this blessed people.

The political significance of the occurrence lies in the fact that there is now an heir to the throne of The greatly feared, a circumstance that will give to the Netherlands independence.

Her Majesty was married in Prince
Feb. 10, 1890, on which occasion the Netherlands was a republic and the throne had been vacant for several years.

Here in the capital, in spite of the fact that the birth of the princess is gayly decorated and great ceremonies are being held, the people showed no special interest in the event.

Her Majesty accompanied by trumpets and bands, and the people rounds of the city, halting at the palace, where the princess was born, spots to make, after the fashion, the people of the Netherlands.

"Follow-Christ! With great joy for the birth of the princess, which was by the grace of God, has been delivered of a girl."

The entire population of The Netherlands, which is about 3,500,000, of the Dutch people and is thankful for the birth of the princess, which will give to the Netherlands independence.

At the long everything is quiet except the celebration of the birth of the princess, which is being celebrated with great joy and gratification.

St. John's, Nfld., May 1.—Sir Robert Bond, the former Premier, met with a rough reception when he attempted to land at a station at Western Bay, the center of the Bay de Verde straits, for the purpose of delivering a political address.

Sir Robert was scolding the towns and villages along the coast, and the interest of his party. He was not well received, and some of the townsmen, Sir Edward Morris, party and warrant, had the shaven of Western Bay did not desire to hear him. The former Premier was shoved overboard by the

"Bile! I am an English hunter!"

And as if you were after the same horse in England, straight to the French Embassy, Dimitri to the French minister, giving to the French minister in person this pocket book. He hands him Dimitri, with all the papers of the revolution, the minister the Hermann mentioned in his correspondence is looked up under care of Francoise, my servant, and I am not far in person in two hours, take a person that pocket book, napkins, and Hermann to General Gorko, who is a soldier, a policeman, or he will never look at his old friend, and he Verney again.

Now, Glims goes by

A GOLDEN HEART.

CHAPTER I.

In the pretty quiet drawing-room of White Cliffs, Quebec, Clifton Dolores was an old man, whose hair was grey and whose face was furrowed with age, whose figure was bent and whose hands trembled with weakness as he sat in his easy chair, his hands folded, his face pale as the hands of a corpse, his face pale as the hands of a corpse.

He had gathered together every available shilling he had even mortgaged White Cliffs, so sure was he of success—and he had invested the money in mining shares, which he had been assured would bring him ten per cent. for their value. He had at least thirty per cent. and he was certain to make a large fortune—the spirit of the new company told him. And the acquire—never was there when money was concerned, never a young of judgment in making investments—was only too delighted. He started every morning he had in the world, and for one year he enjoyed a wonderful increase of income. But that morning he was called to a letter which told him of the utter ruin. The company was a complete failure; the manager had absconded with all that remained of the capital, and there was nothing but ruin for all the deluded shareholders.

The spirit he had received that letter in the morning, and he had hardly returned home. For many hours he had been trying to realize the utter, awful misery into which he had fallen. His hands failed, his eyes closed, his life wrecked. He was no more pitiable sight could be conceived than the old man in his corner.

The door opened slowly, and into the darkened room came a beautiful, graceful girl, whose face was full of anxious solicitude. She went up to the dressing figure, and laid her loving arms around the square's neck. "Papa," she said, "can you not cheer up? It might have been worse—death is worse."

"Worse, Dolores," he questioned sadly. "Ah, no! Death is much more merciful than poverty and ruin. Could face death with a smile; but I am the last of the Dolores family, and disgrace is worse than death."

"There is no disgrace for you, papa. It is not your fault that you are ruined and swindlers. Tell me, dear, what will be the worst for you?"

"The worst for me will be the work-house or an almshouse in my old age; you there will be hard work, Dolores!"

"Comforter" and Smoking.

Miss Frances Philip of the State Children's Association, introduced a novel theory as to juvenile smoking.

When speaking at the Women's Institute recently, she said it was the common practice of putting "comforter" in the mouths of children who had much to do with boys later on in life to cigarette.

Was Killed By Lightning.

Woodstock College Boy is Victim of Electrical Storm.

James Morrigold, Aged 14, is Killed and a Companion is Badly Hurt—Footbridge is Wrecked at Fort William—Bolt Splintered Dome of Church's Public Library—Storm Was Very Severe.

Woodstock, May 7.—In an electrical storm of great magnitude, which swept over the entire district yesterday afternoon, a boy named James Morrigold, aged 14, was killed, and a companion, a boy named John Smith, was badly hurt. The storm was very severe, and the wind was high. The rain was heavy, and the lightning was frequent. The storm did much damage to property, and several lives were lost.

At Fort William, a footbridge was wrecked by the storm. The bridge was struck by lightning, and the structure was destroyed. The water was high, and the current was strong. The bridge was used by many people, and the accident was a great loss to the community.

In Woodstock, the dome of the church's public library was splintered by a bolt of lightning. The dome was made of wood, and the lightning struck it directly. The damage was extensive, and the dome had to be replaced. The church was a place of worship, and the damage was a great loss to the community.

At Chatham, a public library was damaged by the storm. The building was struck by lightning, and the interior was destroyed. The library was a place of learning, and the damage was a great loss to the community.

called out of town and would be away

for some time.

When the Silent Bell entered her apartment she found on her desk, a typewritten request to report at the principal's office at once. The note lighter up the stairs, opened the door of the office and found herself face to face with Alerton.

"Good morning, Miss Edwards," said

Alerton blandly. "I would like to consult with you as to the matter of the writing of this school report. I trust I may count upon your co-operation during my presidency here."

"John Henry Alerton," said Belle,

"what are you doing here?"

"My good looks," answered he gravely.

"I suppose to tell me your position."

"I am here," said she, "with great difficulty." "So tell me," said he.

"Good looks," repeated Belle.

"As reported by the photographer," sent Joe during the holidays," exclaimed Alerton.

The light of comprehension began to dawn upon Belle. Being a woman, her intuition helped her to a solution of the problem, and she realized that this Alerton had been obtained here by John Henry Alerton's.

"I really think I can't wait on Alerton," said she. "Your extreme kindness in recommending me, I hope you do not already regret it."

"I don't," replied John. "I was struggling between a belief that she ought to tell Alerton that she had not taken this method to let him know she forgave him a wish to let him know she still cared."

"Belle," said Alerton, becoming earnest. "I found out from your brother

what had happened. As soon as I received his letter I turned to him and discovered the mistake he had made. I can assure my respect. We represent your company in this school. I am a sort of a critical company, but I shall not keep him out of the position

long—that is, if I see one who will go back to me to where I belong. I can tell about that if some one will tell me

how the thing the original of the pho-

GOT THE WHOLE VOTE.

And That Was Truly Given.

That Was Really Kept.

It is almost a fact that the candidates for office in a certain Kansas campaign that he himself brought for a speech in a position. He was a very good speaker and wrote and wrote and wrote to a number of friends there to give him

tips.

One of them told him to use a certain colored man upon his arrival in the town. "He is a very good speaker," said the man, "and you can use him

this night," wrote the friend, "you can get the vote by the night negro population in this town. I will tell you and get him to your way of thinking."

About the first thing the candidate did after he arrived in the town was to look up the negro. It was only a little while before he was ready to be calling the negro by his given name, sitting the negro on his knee, passing him compliments and general praise. "I will tell you," said the negro, "I will tell you, I will tell you immediately. The candidate spent several hours and the negro's account after he thought the proper degree of gratitude had been obtained brought the real object of his friendship.

"Belle," John said the negro vote of this town."

"I'll right," replied John. "I'll

replied John. "I'll right," replied

John. "I'll right," replied John.

"That's all right," said the candidate. "That's all right. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will. I'm sure you will.

"I'll right," replied the negro.

Navigation Rules for Motor Boats.
For the benefit of owners of motor boats and other small craft, the following from the Canadian navigation laws, with which every navigator of a motor boat should familiarize himself, are given.

Any boat propelled by machinery, under the designation of a steam vessel, those driven by gasoline, kerosene, or electricity, must carry a red light at the bow.

The asternmost side of a vessel is the right-hand side looking forward. The port side is the left-hand side looking forward.

The weather side of a vessel is the side on which the wind blows. The lee side is the side furthest from the wind.

Right of Way.
Right of way is the custom of allowing one class of vessel the privilege of holding a course while another class has to give way.

Steam vessels (which include motor boats) must give way to sailing craft and row boats.

Two steam vessels (or motor boats) meeting head on shall steer to the right and pass to the left.

If two steam vessels are approaching each other on a collision course, the vessel which has the other on her starboard side shall keep out of the way.

If two vessels are pursuing the same course the one overtaking the other must keep clear.

When a steam vessel and a sailing vessel are approaching in such directions as to involve the risk of collision, the steam vessel shall keep out of the way of the sailing vessel.

Every boat which is directed by these rules to keep out of the way of another boat, shall so approximate, pass, or stop as to avoid collision.

Lights.
Every boat must be equipped with lights at night. This applies as much to a row boat and canoe as to a large motor boat.

Failure to carry the required lights makes the boat liable to seizure and confiscation. The Canadian Customs authorities have received orders to enforce the law strictly.

Power boats must show a green light on the starboard (right) side, a red light on the port (left) side, and a white light at the bow.

How boats and canoes must carry and show a white light.

All power boats must be equipped with a whistle, or at least with a whistle which can be heard at a distance.

White signals consist of one, two, and three short blasts.

One short blast signifies the vessel is steering to starboard. Two short blasts signify the vessel is steering to port. Three short blasts signify the vessel is stopping.

Boats and Their Offense.
In passing boats marking shoals, if a boat on the starboard (right-hand) side and a black buoy on the port (left) side, a buoy painted red and black indicates that it may be safely passed on either side.

It is the duty of every navigator to see to it that his vessel is self-sufficient in the matter of navigation, and to observe them at all times, and to do so by the rules of navigation, but also to reduce to a minimum the possibility of accidents.

THE GAME FISHES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

This is the title of a pamphlet lately issued by the Government of British Columbia, and which gives a list of the game fishes of the province, and also a list of the game birds of the province. The pamphlet is written by the Hon. J. H. Ross, Minister of the Interior, and is a very valuable work for the sportsman.

GRAHAM COMPROMISES
Minister Francis Railway Bill to Pass Both Houses

Mr. Graham has compromised. He has agreed to amend his Railway Bill so that it will pass both houses of the legislature. This is a significant move, as the bill has been facing considerable opposition in the Senate.

Mr. Graham's compromise involves several key changes to the original bill. These changes are designed to address the concerns of the opposition and ensure the bill's passage. The amendments include provisions for the protection of private property and the improvement of the railway system.

The public accounts committee has also been involved in the process. They have reviewed the bill and provided their own recommendations. The committee's findings are being taken into account by the government in its final decision on the bill.

There was some discussion over the bill in the House of Commons. The members discussed the various aspects of the bill and the proposed amendments. The discussion was thorough and informative.

Mr. Whitney Dissatisfied.
Premier of Ontario Enters Objection to Waterways Treaty.

Mr. Whitney, the Premier of Ontario, has expressed his dissatisfaction with the Waterways Treaty. He believes that the treaty does not adequately protect Ontario's interests in the waterways.

The Ontario Government has entered its formal objection to the treaty. This move is seen as a significant challenge to the federal government's position on the treaty.

Mr. Whitney's objection is based on several grounds. He argues that the treaty gives too much power to the federal government and does not provide enough protection for Ontario's citizens.

The Ontario Government is now working to build a coalition of support for its objection. It is reaching out to other provinces and political groups to gain their backing.

Mr. Whitney's stance has caused a stir in the political world. It has led to heated debates in the House of Commons and has drawn the attention of the public.

The Ontario Government's objection is a clear statement of its position. It shows that the province is not willing to accept a treaty that it believes is unfair and detrimental to its interests.

Mr. Whitney's objection is a significant development in the ongoing debate over the Waterways Treaty. It highlights the deep divisions within the country on this issue.

A GOLDEN HEART.

see, and I am quite sure to find it out some day."

"I give you permission," answered Dolores earnestly, "to tell her that your heart that Lola had guessed so correctly."

"What shall I tell her?" asked Dolores, "and how shall I tell her?"

"I will talk to the square," said Lola.

The beautiful French girl, with her smile, her fresh, pink lips, her eyes, her waiting hair, her dress of luxurious ease. She was thirty, and had asked for her hand. With her white, slender fingers she held a lovely, ripe peach, talking like this to Lola and Dolores, looking at her thought she was more like a picture than a girl.

"You are debating in your mind, Dolores, about your dream," observed Lola. "I can see the perplexity to which your face. Let me decide."

But Dolores had already decided. She took from her wardrobe, a dress of many silk with lace trimmings, the only ornaments she chose being a beautiful parure of pearls. The dress was watched steadily.

"Fideliately," said Lola to herself, "these means to elope in the night. Now for when to say 'good-bye' to this Lola."

Lola thought that is certain; for her Lola is a genuine. It must not be a mistake. I must put a stop to this Dolores."

She said, with the frank frankness of a girl who better assumes, "you have selected your very prettiest dress, and Dolores will not be with you."

Dolores was on her guard and made no answer.

She was more silent than usual, all the way to Belleville. Lola laughed, talked, told her some absurd anecdotes of the Parisian visitors, but on the swift face of Dolores there was a look of anxious thought. What would the evening bring her?

Dolores had vowed to herself that she would not be shy, bold, or proud to Sir Karl, that she would give him every opportunity of speaking to her, and that she would be as amiable as possible to him. Yet, when the first sound of his voice, came, she felt a faint and sickening tremor.

It seemed to realize at all once the great stake she was to win or lose that night.

"He did not come straight to her," Lola had said forward to meet him, and kept him some minutes in the conversation about French guests.

"You must talk to Madame Ginepro," she said. "She was a great favorite with the Empress, and knows more about the French court than anyone else. She is a devoted Imperialist," continued Lola, "and will give her fat smiling 'non' the cause, for you have been so long with the Empress, you will be compelled to go."

"He explicit, Miss de Ferras. Love whom? Madame Ginepro or the Empress?"

The Empress, of course! You know that, I love the Empress more than anyone else. Her life always reminds me of a tragic poem. I think she is the most beautiful, the most charming woman ever created a throne and if you wish to please him," she paused and looked at him archly—"that is, if you really wish to please him."

"Can you do this?" he said, with a faint smile.

"If I do not want to do it? I wish to please him. If you desire to please me, you will talk to Madame Ginepro and learn to love the Empress, Sir Karl."

"Have you any other commands?" asked Lola.

"I will tell you as the evening goes," she replied, "but her face seemed to flash light into his."

"I am so glad to see you at the fair, angelic beauty of Dolores, after a flash from those dark eyes, was like a change of the spirit beams of a star, with her money sun for cheer, calm moonlight."

"Undoubtedly," she said, "the thoughtless words."

"How beautiful! Miss Clenden looks tonight! What a poetical face she has!" he said.

"The remark gave Lola the very opposite of her own."

She was more like a white rose than ever. But, do you know, Sir Karl, I have more than a suspicion that the white rose was already?"

"I am not the champagne of the chandelier, or did his face really glow as she spoke?" she said.

"Yes," she continued, "the wars of the roses—so far as the roses are concerned—yes, I believe, ended."

"You speak in riddles, Miss de Ferras," he said, "and I detect half-hour, he asked, with happy air."

"What do you mean?" she said. "I was so little innocent in his love."

"You must promise me not to tell," she replied, "I have perhaps no right to speak, and mind, Miss Clenden."

"You know that I am not a spy, but I know I am sure—I—"

"You told me that I shall respect your confidence," he said. "Why should I not?"

"I believe," she went on, "and I have never seen her."

have every reason for my belief; that there is some understanding between Lola and Dolores."

"Lord Ryghworth?" he cried in surprise. "Why, he is old enough to be her father."

"But he is not my dear darling," said Dolores, "young man's name, 'dread'."

"But he did not heed her. He was muttering something under his breath—words of anger and annoyance, which pierced her to the heart."

"You should be angry," said Lola, "but you are not. I wish you would speak a little more plainly," he said, impatiently.

"Do you mean that they are engaged?"

"I must not say so in so many words," she replied; but I believe you can see the perpetuity to which your face. Let me decide."

Sir Karl felt he had lost the only treasure life held for him, for he had never loved Dolores Clenden as he should have loved her. He was wondering that Lola watched the handsome figure of her companion. There could be no mistake as to the agitation Dolores expressed there. She asked herself if she had been blinded, the maiden-mild, was it possible that he cared for Dolores after all?

"You say quite sure of this matter," said Miss de Ferras?" he asked, presently.

"Quite sure," she replied, "and an excellent match it will be. I thought when I remember that on my return to Germany I considered Lord Ryghworth, the most eligible part of the country."

"Do you not now?" he asked, trying to speak earnestly.

She looked him full in the face, as she answered, her eyes flashing.

"I must not say I do not," she said.

"He was flattered by the implication. He knew that she referred to him, but he could not come himself sufficiently to talk to her. After a few more words he made some excuse for leaving her."

He was angry and annoyed, though he had not reason for feeling so. He considered himself injured in some fashion, and he would not have been told, but he was not.

"She need not surely have been in such a hurry," he said to himself. "It is still very young. How can she marry a man of more than double her age? It is impossible that she should love him, she is so young and full of life for her money. It is shameful for young girls to be so mercenary. I am disappointed in her."

"I wonder if all that men say about money is true. If money and position are all that they can for! This girl with an angel's face is so mercenary, and she looks like the very picture of avarice."

Money and inflated, yet without any grounds for these feelings, Sir Karl avoided Dolores; and she, whose "last chance" was rapidly fading, grew sad and homesick.

In the drawing-room, her dress falling in picturesque folds about her slender girlish figure. Behind her was a magnificent group of statues, the turned, and while looking at the statue, Dolores, debated within herself whether the night would pass without his speaking to her, or whether, on some pretext, she should address him.

She was startled from her dream by Lady Fieghen went up to her.

"By and by Lady Fieghen went up to her."

"Sir Karl," she said, "you will present, I am sure, a valuable find. I will try to persuade Miss Clenden to sing for her."

He felt no inclination to receive her, but he said, "I have failed," he said, quickly.

"I am not a failure, and far more," he said.

"I do not think so," said her Ladyship, with a peculiar smile. "At least let me urge you to try."

"You wish me to ask Miss Clenden to sing?" he said, and then, without ignoring the fact that he had been teaching Dolores to sing for the last half-hour, he asked, with happy air.

"But where shall I find Miss Clenden?"

Her ladyship replied promptly: "Do not see her here, but at the scene of plays never takes her from you. Now, do you bidding, and make sure that a brave man never takes her from you."

He felt no inclination to receive her, but he said, "I have failed," he said, quickly.

to herself. "As though I had never read love to his eyes! I am certain that he likes Dolores Clenden."

Dolores thought that the desire of her heart was to be accomplished at last. Sir Karl was making his way to her. Her heart throbbed, and her face flushed; then a great, almost unendurable calm came over her. If he cared for her, she was sure that in some vague manner, she would, discover it.

He did not look very happy, the ring had gone from his voice, and the laughter from his face. In brief words he said her last remark, adding:

"I fear I shall ask in vain. If you are not so kind as to permit me, it is hardly likely that I shall be more successful."

She looked up at him with a smile. "Glad you ask me, and it will please you," she replied. "I will do—but not at present. The room is so full of people. I wonder if I could get an exit."

KEEPING BUDGET MARK

UTMOST SECRECY IS OBSERVED BY CHANCELLOR.

Huge Sums of Money Might Be Made if Features of Financial Statement of Britain Might Be Found Out by Admirals, But Facts Are Jealously Guarded by a Few-News-News.

London, Oct. 10. (Reuters.)

It is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to some people to know the exact details of the British budget. There are speculators on the Stock Exchange who could make a fortune out of the knowledge of the details of the budget, and it is to holders of treasury stocks, a most valuable asset.

The Chancellor, however, has been so careful to keep the budget secret, that the speculators have been unable to make a fortune out of it.

RELIC OF ANTIQUITY.

"Catharine" writes "To take a lot about the ladies' hats. Let me, are any of them as bad as the 'stove' pipes," dating from Noah, which some of the men wear."

Perhaps not, sister, but (hey don't wear 'em in church.

From the point of view of a bicyclist, the front St. roadway is pretty bad now. All except the wet spots; they are very bad.

THE MARATHON MINSTRELS.

"John" said the man of the bene and "we are told me why the Belleville bakers raised the price of bread."

"No, sir," said the gentlemanly interlocutor, "I cannot; why did the Belleville bakers raise the price of bread?"

"Because they wanted to keep their noses from getting too much."

"Very good, sir. Now everybody will keep their noses with our men warblers 'There were no devotees' of 'Theater' after School. When I was a boy."

"I got a little one for you, John," said Tombs, "but I'd be at stone is so plentiful in Belleville that the Boarders can't dig down for the new school."

"What kind of stone is so plentiful in Belleville that the Boarders can't dig down for the new school?"

"That's what's water, of course."

"But that's not water, it's water, through as water's water, water. Signor Grass, our silver-tipped trawl, will never catch that beautiful spring lake."

Handsome and burlesque will soon be seen. But we are getting too blushing at the little pipe."

Queen Victoria Park threatened to be a sure-thing thing of beauty this season. The new club house is a devoted acquisition, and we hereby make a vote of thanks to whoever is responsible for the building of that cement wall at the north end of the harbor. What was formerly a stakeholder for rubbish and dead cats is now shapely and ornamented.

As a matter of fact there is yet too much room on the park to build of such good, green, growing, and so on, but rubber boots no, but things may dry up after a while. The outlook is not promising, however. It would appear that a wise move would be to shift the baseball ground to the park entrance. The ground would be drier and the "windmills" would be further away from the frogs, too.

Hon. Jim Fay says the Crown went down the Klondike once it's solved. So it would appear that children, when our great-grandchildren are laying the corporation of a College Institute in Belleville, they will be all talking about the Klondike case.

Don't want to knock at all, of course, but there were just 13 present at the meeting of the Boarders last night, when they paid up to the Council to submit the $7000 by law.

It is said that fiction exists in the Palace of the department between the chairman, Ad. Leag, and City Engineer Lindsay. The latter, it is alleged, says he is being ignored. The matter may be thrown out at Monday night's Council meeting.

Comfort and Convenience

If you have never experienced the pleasures of living in a "Sunshine" heated house, let us tell you that it is a comfort and convenience which is fully appreciated.

For an average of seven tons of coal to an eight-roomed house, an even temperature of sixty-five to seventy can be kept up from October to April. Once a is stajged there is no work attached to its operation beyond placing in coal twice a day, and drawing out ashes and filling water pan every other day. Chasing on a pulley fixed in the hall, or room above the cellar, answer the respective requirements for—Burning Up, or Chasing Off.

Sunshine Furnace

Carriage is necessary, no engineer has to be called in. No precautions, beyond following directions, are necessary.

If you can run a stove (and who cannot) you can run a Sunshine Furnace.

Phone or call on the furnace man in your town, whose name appears below, and secure full particulars.

COLLEGE WOMEN.

Miss Woolley's Belief in They Have a Sense of the Value of Life.
"Isn't the number of marriages, it is the quality of marriages, that matters both to us and to future generations," said Miss Mary Z. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke college, in her talk at a college women luncheon held recently. "College women," she said, "have a sense of the value of life. Their attitude toward marriage is not unlike that of the little girl who was being married in white."

"What is the best thing and the hardest thing in the world to do?" asked the speaker, expecting the answer to be "getting married," piped the pupil. "Yes, that's true."

Miss Woolley said she believed the professional woman's love of home was deeper and stronger than that of the occupational woman. As to whether women should go out in the world, she said it was to be decided by the individual. It depends on temperament, the individual question of what woman's work is was never so broad as it is today or so ill defined.

Miss Woolley admired the college women to work for the welfare of the "homeless" widows, the women laborers in tenements which it is a tragedy to call homes, and especially the social settlements if it takes every drop of her life, leaving blood you have in your veins."

Dr. Ballist, another speaker at this luncheon, said the H. of America's higher institutions of learning was seriously threatened by the mediocrity that were taking place. "But we can more easily make men than college than women's colleges," he said. "The women in the colleges demand that they specialize; women are not made to be broad, liberal students. They do not require to be trained so much. Perhaps nature has specialized them here."

WELL KNOWN PHRASES.

Sentence One Quaker, but Often Car't "Pious."

The phrase "There no stone unturned" is frequently employed in every-day conversation, but yet also people often use who say it would be useless to tell its derivation.

The expression is taken from "Judith" and relates to an answer given by the Delphic Oracle to Polytrius about treasure locked by Xerxes' general, Marodon, on the battlefield of Falces.

The oracle said that to discover the treasure it would be necessary to (translated literally) "turn every stone" which has gradually taken the form of "leave no stone unturned" and nowadays.

"A Feather in His Cap."
This familiar saying originated in the Middle Ages, when it was customary for knights to honor each of their followers as distinguished themselves in battle by presenting them with a feather to wear in their caps, which when not in armor was the covering of their heads, and no one was permitted that privilege who had not "filled his cap."

Why They're "Quakers."
Members of the Society of Friends are frequently designated by outsiders as "Quakers," but few people probably have any idea that Quakers is a nickname given in scorn.

George Fox, the founder of the sect, gives the origin of the name in his journal: "Jehovah Brought of David wrote I into his quize and tremble about the word of the Lord." This occurred in 1652.

A Luncheon Dish.
Smelts sautéed in rice with beads and tails together, dipped in milk and flour and fried in deep fat make an attractive fish course.

Garnish the plate on which they are served with cross and slices of lemon that have been dipped in minced parsley. If they are to make the main part of the meal, serve them around a mound of potato or make a potato border and serve the fish rings in a mound.

The smelts may be stewered with a hotpot; and the shrew may be removed after the fish is cooked, as the ring will usually keep its shape.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

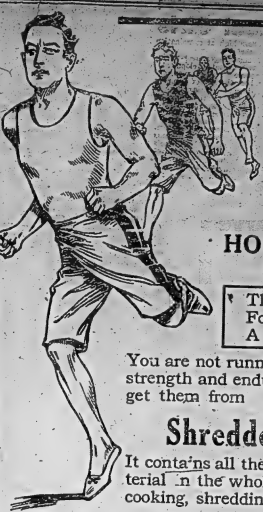

In managing wrinkles use the tips of the fingers and thumb, always working across the line. Never follow the lines of the creases.

Washing the eyes morning and night in water as hot as it can be borne is a wonderful tonic for the delicate servants, which are so easily injured.

When a child is restless from teething it can often be quieted by giving it a warm bath. The water should be as hot as can be endured without burning. Do not allow the child to stay in the bath long, or weakness will follow.

To reduce the blue stand up straight and by bending forward make the fingers tips touch the floor. Do not wear tight clothes and do not bend the back. This is an old exercise, however, it is a good one, and it is much used in the army for this purpose.

Often when one has a cold the eyes feel hot and are red and inflamed. The best way to effect a cure is to bathe the eyes frequently with a solution of borax and water. If the eyes do not feel improved after your cold disappears it would be well to consult an oculist.

A GOLDEN HEART

For life, and at his death it will come to them, and then to their hands. Do, Dolores, and you yourself shall give them to him.

She thanked him in simple, kindly words; but he was not content. "I am not relinquishing in return. Do, Dolores, do you know what it is?"

"I am willing to be married," she replied. "I think how little she could give him anything, and he would give her nothing before; and to make it of any value you must give it to me of your own free will."

"I will give it to me," she said, "and you shall have it. I am sure you will not, darling. I am sure you will not, darling. I do not know why I should be blessed with the love of such a pure and faithful heart. I have never to say, Dolores. Though I buy you with no jewels, I have you to give me diamonds and rubies than almost any other man in the land."

"I am sure you will not, darling. I do not know why I should be blessed with the love of such a pure and faithful heart. I have never to say, Dolores. Though I buy you with no jewels, I have you to give me diamonds and rubies than almost any other man in the land."

I am not accustomed to weddings. I have never seen a wedding before. Lord Rhyward was delighted with it.

"I have been thinking very seriously," he said, "about whom I shall marry. It is to be the most delicate of all. Our wedding will be quite a surprise to all."

GRAND SUCCESS

Wonderful Growth in Sales During Week.

The year just passed will long be remembered for the financial and commercial depression. Throughout those months of gloom and despair, the sales of the "Palm-olive" doubled in 1909.

The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited, Toronto, Ontario, has been successful in securing a large order for "Palm-olive" from the wholesale buyers of the United States.

"Palm-olive" is a hair oil of the highest quality, and is the most popular of all hair oils. It is the only hair oil that is not greasy, and is the only hair oil that is not sticky.

ECONOMICAL PRIZES.

Dainty Little Bows Made From Short Lengths of Silk.

It is the custom to give prizes for all games and contest entertainments, therefore the woman who does much entertaining is ever on the lookout for new ideas.

A girl who had not much money to spend, but whose parties are celebrated for their informality and the touch of novelty found in the arrangements, hit upon a set of prizes for a recent card party that proved so popular they may be suggestive.

Dainty hairbushes were ordered with stylish bows and white Japanese matches. These and other things were used, and the dainty bows were not more than two inches across when finished.

The bows can be picked up quite cheaply when sales are brisk, and the small lengths of silk are a good sight. They are simple to make, a considerable saving with a hair clip.

A pattern for each bow and a half dozen of the bows were ordered. The bows were made with the silk and the material cut down. Four of these pieces were cut, and each one was given to a guest. The bows were given up into a gift sack as each one was made.

Two bows were then served together neck to neck, and one set of bows was placed on top of the other and the joining covered with a narrow fold of silk.

Half a dozen such bows can be made in a short time, and if pretty colors are chosen they are extremely becoming to the hair. The bows are a gift when combined in the box with contrasting shades.

Half a dozen such bows can be made in a short time, and if pretty colors are chosen they are extremely becoming to the hair. The bows are a gift when combined in the box with contrasting shades.

The bows were made with the silk and the material cut down. Four of these pieces were cut, and each one was given to a guest. The bows were given up into a gift sack as each one was made.

Two bows were then served together neck to neck, and one set of bows was placed on top of the other and the joining covered with a narrow fold of silk.

A new good luck emblem has been found.

The discoverer, a young man, has found it in the ruins of a temple in the city of Thebes, Egypt. It is a small, oval-shaped object, about the size of a pea, and is made of a dark, polished material. It is believed to be a good luck charm, and is said to have been used by the ancient Egyptians for centuries.

DEFENCE CONFERENCE

Naval Correspondence Is Discussed in House.

Hon. Mr. Foster Points Out That Policy Determined Upon by Canadian Government Will Take a Long Time to Carry Out and Will Be of Little Use to Us as a Result of the War.

Attorney-General's Office—Ministers Do Not.

Ottawa, May 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday morning presided over the House of Commons in a session devoted to naval defence, as passed between the Imperial and Federal authorities. The Premier announced that the Government had accepted and that the House would go to sleep when the time arrived.

On March 30 Earl Grey forwarded to the House of Commons a memorandum on the subject of the action of the Imperial Government.

On April 30 Lord Grey wrote again, asking the House to consider the memorandum. The House then considered the memorandum, and the Premier announced that the Government had accepted and that the House would go to sleep when the time arrived.

On May 2 Lord Grey replied to the Premier's statement that the Government had accepted and that the House would go to sleep when the time arrived.

The House Ends Session.

Prorogation Comes After Unusually Short Session.

His Excellency Earl Grey in Speech From the Throne Refers to War of Parliament Regarding Railway Act, G. T. P. Loan, Ministry of Labor, New Secretary of External Affairs and Plans for Navy.

Ottawa, May 20.—After an unusually short session of four months, Parliament prorogued tonight, to meet again probably towards the end of the summer.

The formal ceremony was brilliant, the gay uniforms of the officers in the train of the Governor-General, the court dress of the state officials and the brilliant costumes of the ladies adding dignity to the forthcoming session.

In the Senate Chamber were the Australian delegates to the forthcoming conference in London, as well as several of the Western Canadian representatives.

The Commons met at 2 o'clock, and by an unanimous vote of the House, the Black Rod, clad in the livery of the House, and the brilliant costumes of the ladies adding dignity to the forthcoming session.

Torontonians will have more than a passing interest in the "Standard Bible Dictionary," which has just been published by Messrs. Funk and Wagnall, of New York, inasmuch as the list of thirty-seven distinguished bibliographers and scholars who have acted as editors includes President C. C. F. of Toronto University.

The names of Prof. McGee, as a specialist in Oriental literature, and Dr. J. H. Thayer, as a specialist in the history of the Bible, are among the most important subjects treated in it, and it is to be expected that it will be a valuable work, which is one of the most complete and comprehensive ever published.

A COLE HEART.

"You have him to call. Why did you change your mind? What was the reason? Why are you leaving without coming near us?"

"I had a reason," he answered, his face flushing; "besides which, I wrote the simple truth. I had no time. I was leaving England sooner than I intended."

"What was the reason?" she asked.

"I can't explain," he said, proudly. "You think any reason would suffice for you, even if they did for you? They did not; therefore I am here."

He had not one word to say. The beautiful, passionate face and ringing voice bewitched him. He was not prepared for a scene of this kind. She laid her hand upon his arm, as though she would compel his attention.

"Do you think to little and so lightly of our friendship that you could go without having seen me again? I would not let you go; my I could not even bear the thought that you should see me again. How could you do it? Oh, Sir Karl, how could you have left?"

The dark eyes were dimmed with tears. Although he did not love her, and never would, he could not help being touched by her sorrow. What man could resist a beautiful face shadowed with grief, and level eyes shaded with tears for his sake? Sir Karl was but human. She took the white hand from his arm and held it to his.

"I am afraid," she said, smiling through her tears, "that, even if I had not had the books for a pretext, I should have come just the same. Do you think it is very wrong of me to have come?"

Sir Karl looked uncomfortable.

"What am I to answer?" he said, with a forced smile. "I cannot say that it is right, and it seems unkind to say that it is wrong."

"Promise me this, at least, that you will be the friend of my friends, and the interest in yourself which prompts me to come. Will you promise me that?"

"Yes," he replied. "I may satisfy promise that. I am sure you mean it kindly."

He seemed to treat the whole matter as a friendly interview, and this did not please Lady.

"Kindly?" she repeated, bitterly. "What a word to use to me! I am not kindly to you. In coming to say good-bye to me, I have been kind to myself and sorrow it would give me?"

"How can you be always very good to me?" he replied; "but I could possibly think that the going or coming of a mere acquaintance is the same as of any moment to you."

He said this purposely to hurt her, this was no love scene in which she had loved him, as it were, to take a part. The wither had been suddenly from his clasp, and stood before him cool and haughty.

"Do you mean that you look upon yourself as nothing but a mere acquaintance—nothing near or dear to me—that the end of all my happy hours together—a mere 'acquaintance'—will be to me, as it is to you, a mere 'acquaintance'?"

"Yes," he said, "it implies a great deal, fidelity, forgiveness, and loyalty."

"And will you not give those to me?" she asked.

There was silence for some moments. He found that, so far from having treated him from a false position, he had increased his position.

"That is much to ask," he answered gravely. "I must consider the question," she asked.

"What?" she cried. "Do you hesitate when I ask you?"

"I do not hesitate. I say it is very serious question. A pledge of friendship given and taken in that fashion is as grave a matter as any."

He paused; for the words that rose into his lips would, he knew lead him into greater complications.

"I know what you mean," she said, with a sigh and a smile that were irresistible—"you mean that it is as grave a matter as a promise of marriage."

The splendid, dark eyes raised suddenly to his face seemed to suggest the thought, "Why did he not make that?" He read the question in one glance, and he felt afraid of himself.

"Of course it is a solemn pledge," he continued, "but it is one that I can give you and not a love in vain. I can give with more than to love a friend. A man who rejected an offer of friendship would not be wise."

"Do not reject it," said De Ferras.

"The smile that flashed back to him from the girl's beautiful eyes made him feel almost speechless.

"Do you say, Sir Karl, but you do not mean it, is it in a hurry to accept?"

"I repeat," he said, "that you are very good to me. You know what the post card means. 'Without wings.' Your offer of it may be doubly valuable to me for this reason—I am not what is called a marrying man. I love one, and most unshakably. I have no heart to give, and knowing this, I ought to have doubly the friendship of a woman."

Her face pale, and first as she listened, then a gleam of proud defiance came into her eyes which, if he had caught it, would have put him on his guard. It would have said to him, "I am not what you think."

"You are right," she said; "if you are never to know the love of woman, friendship is the next best thing. I would not have believed, Sir Karl, that you were once a love in vain."

"I do not love in vain," he answered sadly.

"Perhaps," she said, "some day when we know each other better, you will tell me the story."

"I think not," he replied, all his former distrust returning. "The past is buried."

"The gleam of defiance, however, in his dark eyes.

"Do you say you are right, I shall you have told me this—I shall understand you better. And from now we are, it be faithful friends, loyal to each other at all times and in all places. Do you say?"

"How could he resist the sweet thrill of this?"

"Yes," he answered, "he replied, 'How can I help feeling such a compact gladly?'"

She placed her hands in his, and they were held so long as we both live you will be my true friend."

"I give," he said.

Brighten Up

From a sanitary standpoint, painted walls have a great advantage over papered ones because they can be often washed and scrubbed with soap and water. When you have paper on your walls and it fades or peels, or discolors, you must repaper. To Brighten Up a painted wall, simply wash it. Talk it over with your dealer—ask him for

Victoria Day at D and D. Institute

Victoria Day was really celebrated at the D. and D. Institute yesterday. In the afternoon the people enjoyed themselves with athletic sports, and in the evening there was a magnificent display of fireworks. Many city people were present. The guest of the evening was the Hon. J. D. Campbell, who was an ideal host. One of the most interesting features of the evening was the singing of the national anthem, which was sung with great fervor. The evening closed with a display of fireworks, which was most spectacular.

Ladies' Wash Suits, Waists and Dresses

Wash Garments are now the chief attraction of our Ladies' Wear Department, never before has there been shown such an array of stylish Garments designed for Ladies' Summer wear. This week we make a special showing of Northway's Wash Suits, every garment of which is made with the same care and stamped with the same style as is characteristic of all Northway Suits.

Ladies' Princess Moll Dresses and Ladies' Net and Wash Waists in Embroidered and tailored styles, also add to the attractiveness of our Ladies' Wash Garment Display.

Tried to Blow Up Town. Pittsburgh, May 28.—The model town of Maitland, where more than 200 people live, was threatened with destruction when a fire was set on fire from the face of the earth with dynamite.

Because a friend had been sent to the police, and another man killed by a fall of steel, Martin Rich, a gas fitter, became extremely angry, and placing dynamite in the house of the man who was with the intention of destroying the town, something went wrong with the explosion, and there were only two small explosions. The police captured him from his position on the ground.

Suspended by His Boss. Windsor, May 28.—Pete, an employee of the Windsor Cotton Plant, had a close call yesterday when he was suspended by his boss, George Stevens, for not working hard enough.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE QUESTION WHETHER.

(George Meredith)

When we have "news of this old mill,"
Do we not need of mending,
To make among the moved mill,
Is that, think you, our ending?
We follow many, none we lead,
And you may say I'm deaf.
Believe not that all living need
Must show above this surface.

Penetration is a glorious gift:
But when it is coupled to action,
The graver to have it east drift
Would sweep from all creation.
Enough if we have wisdom to use,
Flashed the glow of the sun.
There is a soul for labor done,
But should find as reason.

Then let our trust be in God,
Though we be of the fasting;
Our questions are a mortal brood,
Our work is everlasting.
We children of Britannia
Are in the better climes,
And whither vaunt sounds than Values.

ward—Guests Witness His Pass in All Parts of the Country.

Berlin, May 31.—Count Zeppelin, whose remarkable performance in his first airship brought unbounded honor to his country, yesterday accomplished the most striking feat in his career. His passenger Zeppelin, the first of the new class of airships, with its own engine, took to the air at 10 o'clock. The journey lasted more than 20 hours and ended at 10 o'clock. Zeppelin is still in the air, on the return to his home at Friedrichshafen. He had already beaten all records for duration of flight and had the opportunity of greatly improving the performance of his machine.

It was announced and widely distributed in special editions of the newspapers that the count would come to Berlin and land at the Temple of Peace grounds. Hundreds of people were waiting for him. The Emperor and Empress, accompanied by the King and Queen, were waiting for him. The count was met in anticipation of the arrival of the airship. A detachment of his own troops was sent to meet him. Terrible Storm Carries Devastation and Death in South.

Texas and Oklahoma Are Swept Land Thirty Are Reported Dead in Town of Brownwood—Several More Are Killed in Dewasa and Kay West, Okla.—North Dakota is Also a Sufferer in Lives and Property

Brownwood, Texas, May 31.—A tornado wrecked Zepp, a Christian in Brown County, early yesterday, killing more than thirty persons, ruining property, wounding many and leaving a scene of horror. Extreme darkness made the catastrophe worse.

The known dead: C. A. Cagle and wife; Countess Thelma Cagle, her mother and two children; C. A. Cagle and wife; Countess Thelma Cagle, her mother and two children; C. A. Cagle and wife; Countess Thelma Cagle, her mother and two children.

The storm formed half a mile south of Zepp and swept down on the village, cutting a wide swath directly through the residence and business quarters.

Nearly fifty houses were demolished, and a large number of people were killed. The storm was so violent that it carried away the roofs of many houses and the walls of many buildings.

Hundreds of persons in the country were panic-stricken and fled in all directions. The storm was so violent that it carried away the roofs of many houses and the walls of many buildings.
